For a part of last week the harbinger of spring was here, The temperature warmed to such extent as to bring the flies and bees out of their hiding places and make melody in our ears with their buzzing. Even the birds made their appearance and cheered us with their songs. Many of us opened the doors of business houses and dwellings, and paid no attention to our fires. But what a change appeared this morning. The face of the earth was covered with about three inches of snow, and a low temperature, indicating plainly that spring has not yet supplanted winter. Winter will, I presume, rule for some days to come. This, of course, is no news to our numerous readers, but is made to

Rest for Postoffice Employes.

The employes of the Greenville postoffice are now required to be on duty a portion of each Sunday. A nation-wide movement contemplates the closing of the postoffice on the Sabbath, so that these faithful employes of the government and servants of an exacting public may have one day of rest in seven. Many cities have already adopted the plan and are satisfied.

Let it be understood here and now, that the postmaster of Greenville and his assistant are not seeking an arbitrary rule. They want the cordial assent of our people, for it is their pleasure to discharge, in singular and detail, every duty incumbent on them. It must be added, that these gentlemen and ladies fail to understand just why they should work seven days a week when the great mass of their neighbors respect and enjoy the

There are several angles in the viewpoint on this question. First, does the necessity for Sunday labor exist, or is it the result of a habit, pure and simple? Let the facts answer. About 150 people, largely children, call at the carrier's window Sunday morning. Many business concerns, of course, secure their mail now through private boxes and this it is proposed to continue as heretofore.

Again, it is contended on the The appointment made to be- part of the friends of this movegin revival meeting tomorrow ment that there is seldom any night in our M. E. church has need for "Sunday mail," since really important letters may be and are, delivered under a specpreaching service in this church ial delivery stamp. This service will continue.

> The postoffice force want it distinctly understood that there is no disposition on their part to shirk any proper duty. They ac cepted their positions with the purpose to loyally serve our people and make the services as broad and comprehensive as possible. They still adhere to that purpose and expect to continue in the discharge of their duties.

What they do want is, an honest expression as between man and man on the proposition t grant them what they feel they are fairly entitled to, "to rest from their labors one day in seven." This in view of the fact, patent to them, and they believe, to all who will address themselves to the problem, that the rights or interests of no one will be put in jeopardy or in any material manner be transgressed.
